Decision Will Rest with Mother When She Arrives from Europe.

TO AVOID JURY ORDEAL.

May Seek to Have Young Millionaire Sent to Criminal Institution.

EDNA MCCLURE RETURNS.

Actress Reiterates She Knows Nothing About Motives Leading to Tragedy.

On the day Harry Thaw's mother reaches New York his lawyers will begin definite measures in their fight to prove their millionaire client insane in advance of any trial. They may seek to have him committed to the asylum for the criminal insane at Matteawan if she gives the word, and thus save him the ordeal of facing a jury for the murder of Stanford White.

It is already assumed that the defense will be insanity, but until Mrs. William Thaw arrives from Europe the plan of the legal campaign must necessarily be more or less decided.

She is expected to put in the hands of the attorneys facts tending to show that from infancy Harry Thaw's actions led his parents to believe he was mentally irresponsible at times. She can also tell them much of a strain of inherited insanity in the Thaw blood, often skipping one generation to come to the surface in another.

Thaw Examined Again.

In the meantime Judge Olcott and the other lawyers associated with him in the case are contenting themselves largely with securing the services and the reports of scientists. To-day Prof. Charles M. Dana, a noted expert in mental disorders, went to the Tombs and spent twenty-five minutes in conversation with Harry Thaw. Prof. Dana's aid had been retained by Dr. Allan McLane Hamilton, the specialist, who has had the millionaire prisoner under almost constant observation for several days.

Edna McClure Returns.

Edna McClure, the actress who was questioned by Assistant District Attorney Garvan Sunday concerning her knowledge of the three-cornered intrigue between Harry Thaw, Stanford White and Evelyn Nesbit, The girl returned last night from Boston, where she is appearing with "The Tourists" company. Her sole object in coming was to repel the denial she made exclusively in The Evening World yesterday of the statements attributed to her in her interview with Mr. Garvan by a number of newspapers. She had first telephoned Mr. Garvan from Boston asking him to contradict the reports. To-day at Judge Olcott's office she said:

"Mr. Garvan, I am sure, if he chooses to break silence, will agree with me that my acquaintance with Mr. Thaw and with Mr. White yielded nothing which could have the remotest bearing upon the murder, and that our conversation on Sunday demonstrated this."

"I told Mr. Garvan that personally I knew nothing of the feelings of the ape toward the other; that I had heard no threats; that there was no possibility of my having been made the confidant of either, and that I knew both of them but in the superficial way that dozens of my companions of the theatre did."

"Mr. Garvan concluded with many questions as to reports which had come to my ears regarding the three principals and their relations. I responded freely. For Mr. White and Mrs. Leahy, Mrs. Thaw's maid, both of them had been examined before by Mr. Garvan, but he thought up some new questions he wanted to ask them. As Mr. Garvan was busy with the Martin Tighe trial, Miss McMenamin and Mary Leahy were sent away again. They will return to the District Attorney's office at Mr. Garvan's pleasure, possibly to-morrow."

Judge Olcott told an Evening World reporter this afternoon that his trip to Philadelphia had been of value to the defense. "I secured some very important facts," he said. "I may have inquired regarding an insane relative of Mr. Thaw, but that was merely incidental."

The existence of the much-talked-of affidavit, which Evelyn is said to have signed, is now longer denied by the defense. Mr. McMenamin, who has been looking after Thaw's interests during Judge Olcott's absence from the city, now says that if such an affidavit is produced it will be proved to be a forgery.

FEEBLE MAN KILLED UNDER TRUCK WHEELS.

AFFECTIONATE RUN DOWN WHILE CROSSING STREET NOT IDENTIFIED BY POSSESSIONS.

An unknown man, while attempting to cross the street at Duane street and West Broadway to-day, was knocked down and killed by a truck owned by Henry Flacker Sons, of No. 200 West street.

The driver of the wagon, Frank Maden, of No. 225 East Fortieth street, was arrested and held on a technical charge of homicide.

The dead man had the appearance of a consumptive. He was poorly dressed and had 50 cents in his pockets. There was nothing found on the body by which he could be identified. The body is at the Morgue.

WORK ENGINE RUNS OFF SPREADING RAILS.

Plunges Down an Eight-Foot Embankment and Fatally Injures One Man.

One of the small railway trains used in removing dirt in the new Pennsylvania railway station excavation ran on a temporary bridge early to-day, plunged down an embankment a distance of eight feet and perhaps fatally injured Hector Repetto, of No. 409 Ninth avenue.

The train was completely overturned, but the engineer and brakeman escaped without injury.

Repetto was taken to Roosevelt Hospital, where it was said he would probably die.

The accident was attributed to the spreading of rails.

SAYS HUSBAND WAS A SHERLOCK HOLMES.

Saw Dirt on Her Face and Declared She Had Been Kissed by a Railroad Man.

Because of her husband's brutal and jealous demeanor when she came home on one occasion with dirty face, Mrs. Kate Schorr filed suit for divorce to-day before Vice-Chancellor Garrison, in Jersey City.

Mr. Schorr, it appears, said the black marks on his wife's cheeks were caused by the gloved hand of a railroad employee, who had been kissing her. She concluded it would be uncomfortable to live longer with such a Sherlock Holmes, especially as he had struck her, she claims, for dancing with other men at parties they attended, and once gave her a sound thrashing for talking to a policeman.

Schorr has fled a cross bill in which he explained why he was suspicious of those two wives and had sued seven instances to prove that he was not the only pupil in the family.
